Ball Team to be Organised

The Citizens' Meeting called for the purpose of discussing the future of the Ball Team for 1918, which largely attended, was hardly representative of the business men of the town, but, nevertheless, was successful inasmuch that an unanimous expression of those present was given in favor of securing for the town and district a ball team of which we can be proud.

President McCaugherty informed the meeting that the executive of last year's team felt that under the circumstances they would not be justified in going ahead with the arrangements for the coming season without first obtaining the opinion of the townspeople as to whether baseball should be arranged for during the present war conditions, and will that end in view be asked for the opinion of the meeting.

After a short discussion, during which not one negative opinion was heard, it was decided to have a Ball Team for the coming season.

The election of officers then took place and resulted as follows:

President G. M. Pierce
Vice President T. Hunter
Manager M. R. Miller
Secretary E. F. Currie

The election of an Executive was postponed until a later date.

A discussion ensued with regard to the days of playing and several present expressed their opinion that Sunday games should be cut out of the schedule.

The majority however were of the opinion that it would be impossible to arrange games with teams from the country on any other day, and they contended that under such conditions they would be compelled to continue with games on Sundays.

W. J. Tegenline asked if it would not be possible to secure a regular weekly holiday for the purpose of playing ball games, but the chairman decided such a question could not be decided at the meeting.

From the tone of general discussion it was evident that the boys feel they have in view a team which will be able to hold its own with anyone in the province and they were enthusiastic over the prospects for some real snappy ball for the coming season.

It is to be hoped that the executive will find the necessary support among the fans when they commence their canvassing, and that a generous response will be accorded them.

Death of Mrs. Flanagan

Mrs. Wallace Flanagan, one of Bassano's earliest residents, passed to her long last rest on Monday at her home in Galt, Ontario, after a long and painful illness.

The sad news came as a shock to her many friends for most optimistic reports had been given of Mrs. Flanagan's condition, following an operation which was performed on her early in November of last year.

So glowing indeed were the reports, that Mr. Flanagan, who had been with her since the operation returned to Bassano, believing her to be well on the road to recovery. A few days later, however, Mrs. Flanagan had a relapse and he was recalled by wire, arriving just in time to see her before death occurred.

Mr. and Mrs. Flanagan have earned the friendship and esteem of all the heartiest sympathy of the whole town goes out to Mr. Flanagan and his daughter in their bereavement.

Gouge Must Give Particulars Of His Complaints

The application was heard by Mr. Justice Simmons for a determination of the sufficiency of the particulars in the petition of Jesse Elmer Gouge against Howard Haddon Halliday, under the Dominion Contested Elections Act for a declaration that Halliday was not nominated as a candidate on account of his nomination papers not being signed in accordance with the act and on account of a large number of voters being refused ballots.

The petitioner was the Laurier candidate for the Bow River district and the respondent was the Unionist candidate.

The petition alleges that the respondent was not properly nominated and that the deputy returning officers in many of the polling divisions in the electoral district wrongfully and unlawfully refused to allow many qualified electors to vote, on the ground that such electors being naturalized British subjects were not entitled to vote without production of their naturalization certificates. It is also averred that the returning officer wrongfully advised and instructed the deputy returning officers in all the polling divisions to do these unlawful acts complained of.

The petition also claims that all votes cast for Halliday were null and void and that the petitioner is entitled to the seat.

A. Macleod Sinclair, instructed by Burns & McVay, solicitors, Calgary and Bassano, asked that the petitioner be ordered to give particulars of the names and addresses of the electors who were prevented from voting and the polling divisions where they were entitled to vote. Particulars were also demanded as to whether the instructions referred to in the petition were in writing or verbal.

The court ordered that these particulars be given within 30 days after the petitioner shall have had access to the poll books.

O. E. Culbert and J. S. Varley appeared for Mr. Gouge.

Veterans Jay & Owens Presented by War Veterans' Association.

The Card Social organized by the local Oddfellows last Thursday on behalf of their Societies' War Veterans was made the occasion of a presentation to two of Bassano's War Veterans of the token which the local War Veterans Association intend to present to every Bassano Veteran upon his return.

The two veterans presented were Fred Owens and Bill Jay, both of whom sailed from Bassano.

The Masonic Hall was packed to capacity for the occasion and the double function was highly successful, and the Oddfellows are to be congratulated upon the outcome of their efforts.

We understand that this was the first of a series of like entertainments to be held; the worthy object of the endeavor should ensure as great a measure of success for the other parties.

F. O. B. WINDSOR

With the accuracy of a scientific instrument - or a calculation in mathematics - the Maxwell Motor Company, Limited, has BALANCED the price of its car.

That balancing of the Maxwell price means this

While materials cost what they do now, the Maxwell Company finds, it is impossible to build, and sell for less than $1045, any motor car in which efficiency, durability, economy, comfort, heavy and standard equipment are represented, so they are present in Maxwell.

On the other hand, when being co-ordinated in the Maxwell, all parts get by paying more money for a Maxwell would be either larger size or greater luxury of furnishings.

In other words, the Maxwell is built and sold on the MIDDLE LINE of real value.

This finding of the Maxwell built on the lessons learned in many years of production on a vast scale.

We believe it to be scientifically - absolutely - correct.

"The Food Controller Says"

Hoarding is one of the new words of the war. It means storing up in excess of requirements, especially of food and fuel just at present. Now storing and laying up a prudent supply for real needs is not a crime in peace times, but the man or woman who willfully and coolly decides today to store more food than he or she would want in ordinary times is committing the new crime that has the moral effect of a crime. He is also helping to raise the price to himself of future supplies.

There is no sense for panic among the people of Canada. We must expect to make some food sacrifices and be willing to modify our eating habits and even to eat the food that the soldiers and our Allies may be fed. There is a world shortage of food because, so far as we in Canada are concerned, other people have had to be withdrawn from farms to fight what is our joint fight. One obvious duty is to add to this by, at least saving them as much food as they need to get before they took up our common task.

"Hoarding" is the crime of willfully taking care of one's own skin to the detriment of others, either in the warping lands or at home. Hoarding too much for immediate cellar packing in Canada also has a burden on the poorer classes in the Dominion. The real difficulties are not all over the winter; obstacles in distribution of foodstuffs are adding to the shortage. Moreover, hoarding by people who lack the facilities for storing may easily result in heavy waste.

For this reason, especially, public opinion should be aroused against the practice.

It is a crime that comes down to the sense of right in the latter. If he also knows what patriotism means, knows what others have to undergo only because they did not lag behind in the line in Canada, and in whose piece Canadians might have been out for the accident of geography, there will be no hoarding. Public opinion and public disapproval of hoarding may do much to discourage the practice but nothing can really be effective unless the actual sense of common duty to the community is not only in the mind but in the heart. The better element in the community will refrain from it so far as their own households are concerned and will use their influence against it elsewhere.

There has been some "hoarding" in Canada of sugar, flour and perhaps other commodities. The "grain" hoarding is of small proportions and the effect of measures now under consideration may result in the exposure of the Canadian "food hoarders." Hoarding is a crime, and is unpatriotic. The better element in the community will refrain from it so far as their own households are concerned and will use their influence against it elsewhere.

Often people will buy large quantities of these foods without thinking of the way in which they use to depriving others. Every patriotic Canadian will do well to resolve that he will "play the game" fairly with his neighbor, and with the government, by purchasing food only in normal quantities while the present emergency lasts, and by discouraging hoarding wherever he finds evidence of it.

"There was delay, in a way, and I wouldn't trust the fellow. Still, I don't know how far his influence went, and I suspect Fred had much to do with him for some months. Besides, Daily wasn't at the Crossing when—"

Hulton said nothing for the next few moments and Foster mused, and he thought it cost his father something to tell about him as he did. Hulton, however, seldom showed what he felt and would, no doubt, take the line he thought best with a noise disgorged of the pain it might cause. He reacted to the fact of the table, as if he were tired, and sat very quiet with his chin on his hand, until he asked Foster what he meant by the girl?

"Why did you lend Fred the money he sent the girl?"

"For one thing, because he was my friend," Featherstone answered with a flash. "Then I knew into what straits the need of money can drive a young man. I got into trouble myself some years ago."

Hulton nodded. "Thank you. You helped him out. You have no ground to think he was embarrassed by the need of money on the night he failed."

"I feel sure he was not. He kept me some time talking cheerfully about a hunting trip we meant to make."

"Well," said Hulton again, "you're going to be surprised now. I did not give my residence in frankly as you claim to have done, but kept something back. Mr. Percival went away for two or three weeks, and Fred was the only person beside myself who knew the combination that opens the big safe. On the morning after we found him dead I examined the safe. A number of bonds and a wad of small bills were gone."

"It was significant that Percival was due back next day."

Featherstone started, but his face was hot with scornful anger. "That had no significance. It is soon suspect myself or my partner of stealing bonds, but the safe's been open, throws a net upon the thing. Somebody you haven't thought of has been or found out the combination."

"Then, in face of what you have heard, you do not believe I have fired the shot that took his life?"

"No, sir," said Foster, with quiet earnestness. "I never thought it, and it is impossible to believe it now."

"My partner's opinion's mine," Foster broke in. "Hulton looked from one to the other and a curious angry glitter came into his eyes. It hinted at a pitiless, unchangeable purpose, and bracing himself with an effort he clenched his fist."

"Nor do I believe it! If necessary, I'll let my business and factory go and spend the last dollar I've got to find the man who killed my boy."

"Next moment he sank limply back in his chair, as if the strain and vindictive emotion, reacting on his physical weakness, had overcome him. There was silence until he recovered. Foster felt it something of a relief that the man's icy self-control had broken down."

"Very well," Hulton returned in a shaky voice, "brought you here because you knew my son and I wanted your support. I mean I want to convince Percival, whose help I may need to clear the boy's good name. We'll let that go and try to be practical."

"Were the bonds negotiable?" Foster asked. "Could they be easily sold?"

Percival, who was about fifty years of age and had a reserved manner, answered: "Some were bearer bonds, and if the thief acted quickly, would be as good as cash. Most, however, were registered stock, and it is probable that he would be afraid to sell them in Canada or America."

"What about Europe?"

"That is where the danger lies. If he had clever confederates, a large part of the value of the bonds could be borrowed from a bank, or they might be sold to unsuspecting buyers on a French or German bourse."

"But this would depend on the publicity you give the thing."

"Exactly," Percival agreed with some hesitancy. "I have been trying to make Mr. Hulton recognize Mr. Hulton's name, but I have forgotten that I am a business man. At the inquiry I shirked my duty by keeping something back, and now he expects me to brand my son's good name. The money must go in a guess, it is a trifling loss."

"As a last, you put me wise," said Percival. "But to prove that Fred was innocent, you must find the thief."

"That's so. It must be done with skill and by the best New York private investigation man that I can hire. The job's too delicate for the regular police."

Featherstone, who had been sitting thoughtfully silent, looked up. "Perhaps I'll look the wage clerk over, but the treasurer's office after I left though I lucky to the watchman, Jordan, as I went out."

"No," said Percival sharply. "It wasn't Jordan's work on night guard."

"There was silence for a moment, and then Hulton asked: 'Where did you meet the man you thought was Jordan? Did he answer you?'"

"He was going along the ground floor passage in front of me, and the only light was in the pay office at the end. He stood in the doorway as I passed, and I said, 'It's a cold night, isn't it?' I'd seen a few faces when he answered: 'It will be colder soon.'"

"Then as you passed the door he must have seen your face, though you could not see his," said Hulton, who turned to Percival. "Clark was on night guard and his name's Tom. Where was he when Mr. Featherstone left?"

"In the labrum at the other end of the building. The punch in the check clock shows it. Percival replied."

Hulton pondered, knitting his brows, before he said, "Since you thought the man was Jordan, you wouldn't have seen him again."

"No," he said, "Jordan's height and build, but I only saw his figure. It showed he was rather indolent against the light."

"In the labrum," said Hulton, "you see the importance of this. We have something to go upon. Then he got up in the factory. Then he got up with a look of keen relief at his own face. I thank you for your partner; you have given me hope."

"May all my best wishes go with you to believe what you believe. Now I have something to say to you, Percival, and then he must help me home to bed."

He shook hands with them and let them go. They left the factory in an air of great relief. The yard porter remarked, "My sorry for Hulton. For all his greatness, he takes the thing very hard."

"I imagine the fellow who shot Hulton will show you a very nice note," Featherstone replied. "The old man will run him down. He's determined and energy that helped him to build up his business. Money will bring him behind his power, but I wouldn't like Hulton on my track if he hadn't of seen the man."

Prohibition and the War

Arguments to Prove That Prohibition is a Vital Necessity During War Time

"Prohibition has no vital relation to war," said the New York World, in a recent issue. This was written to support the claim that prohibitionists were simply trying to block the food bill with a clause that was not necessary and they were "not concerned with the defeat of Germany."

We'll let us see. On what must war depend? On men and only by means of men can victory be gained. To fight and win they must eat. The Kaiser, a few years ago, renounced drink himself and said that the next war would be won by the nation that drank the least alcohol.

Kitchener and Lord Roberts knew the same thing and in Egypt and South Africa they decreed prohibition for their armies, and won.

The fear of Russia, and that the great factor contributing to Russia's defeat in the Russo-Japanese war was drunkenness among his soldiers, and early in the present war decreed prohibition in England.

"No vital relation?" "Vital" means "of life." In the conflict depends on the life of men. The clearer the blood, the longer the life, and the purer the blood the greater the hope of recovery from wounds.

Life begins at home where the babe is born, whence the soldiers must come, and where economy of life's forces must begin. If life is not conserved there, will be a dismal failure.

King George realized this and banished liquor from his household when the war began. Kitchener followed the lead of his king. A host of people in Great Britain are clamoring for prohibition and insisting that Germany cannot beat us with whiskey and beer-making are stopped.

If prohibition is good for the soldier and sailor, it is good for the peace and people whence they come. Conservation of food (by prohibiting its manufacture into alcohol) to make men who are to make war is in the highest interests of economy. J. H. Halsewood, Department of Social Service.

WHAT

Canada is pre-eminently a land of wheat. Her fields of waving grain have become symbolic in all parts of the world. She is a wheat exporting country.

Between now and next harvest it will be necessary to deliver on the other side of the Atlantic from 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels of wheat. Millions of men have been taken from wheat raising and sent into the trenches. Fields have been laid waste by the enemy. Ships bearing precious freight of food stuffs have been sunk.

The responsibility, therefore, rests upon the North American continent to make good the deficiency of wheat in the check clock shows it. Percival replied.

Hulton pondered, knitting his brows, before he said, "Since you thought the man was Jordan, you wouldn't have seen him again."

"No," he said, "Jordan's height and build, but I only saw his figure. It showed he was rather indolent against the light."

"In the labrum," said Hulton, "you see the importance of this. We have something to go upon. Then he got up in the factory. Then he got up with a look of keen relief at his own face. I thank you for your partner; you have given me hope."

"May all my best wishes go with you to believe what you believe. Now I have something to say to you, Percival, and then he must help me home to bed."

He shook hands with them and let them go. They left the factory in an air of great relief. The yard porter remarked, "My sorry for Hulton. For all his greatness, he takes the thing very hard."

"I imagine the fellow who shot Hulton will show you a very nice note," Featherstone replied. "The old man will run him down. He's determined and energy that helped him to build up his business. Money will bring him behind his power, but I wouldn't like Hulton on my track if he hadn't of seen the man."

Daylight Saving Economies

Daylight saving seems likely to receive more attention next summer than ever before. One strong reason for the April to September general adoption of the plan is that it will save in electric light and gas plants alone more than a million tons of coal. It is by no means improbable that the Canadian and American governments will both declare summer daylight saving as a measure of national economy, as have Great Britain, France, Germany and other European nations—St. John Globe.

It is understood that they find that not less than $250,000,000 was it required to purchase the brewery and public house located in England and Wales. This is presumed to include the sugar, which is not by the brewers from the maltsters. It does not include spirits, but although there are very few distilleries in England there is something like 150,000 gallons of whisky in this country to deal with, which would be a complicated matter.

It is of interest to note that the extremists on the side of the liquor trade have in the past talked the purchase price up to a figure between 250 and 500 millions—London, England, Daily News.

British Still Muddling Along on the Drink Question

The commission, presided over by Lord Sumner, which was appointed to consider what should be the terms if state purchase of the liquor trade were adopted in England and Wales, has reported. The commission were extremely precluded by their terms of reference from reporting on policy, and therefore do not make any recommendation for the future.

Their business was to consider the terms of purchase if the trade were continued after the war, and the terms of purchase if the government decided on it.

Jupiter resembles the sun and Saturn in the fact that it is not solid in its surface. Its equatorial regions, like theirs, float somewhat freely over the deeper layers of its body.

Seasons are absent from Jupiter's day, which is equal to about twelve of ours. The Jovian day is less than ten hours, or about twenty minutes less than the day of Saturn. Bodies weigh about two and a half times as much on the earth and 20 per cent more at the poles than at the equator.

Jupiter and the poles of Saturn are the only places in the solar system, away from the sun itself where bodies weigh heavier than on earth. There are 10,475 days in the Jovian year. A point at the earth's equator moves a little more than 1,000 miles per hour, a similar point on Jupiter's equator moves about 24,000 miles per hour.

Jupiter has nine moons. The four largest were discovered by Galileo, being among the very first objects revealed by the aid of the telescope. The latest Jovian moon was discovered in 1914 by means of the photographic object being too distant and too small to be seen with the largest telescopes.

The Fate of Our Pig Crop Depends on Our Methods of Today

The fate of the swine grower is the saddest sight. Little have yet definitely known the fate of the swine crop. Many, however, have been and are much concerned. The grower, has been faced, under adverse conditions, and upon analyzing these conditions the conclusion was arrived at that it might have been done so.

1. Turning the sow home with a large number of sows.
2. Too little sunlight.
3. Too little fresh air.
4. Not enough exercise.
5. Insufficient mineral matter in the food.
6. Too little protein.
7. Feeding too much barley.
8. Feeding frozen wheat.
9. And recently the theory has been advanced that it may be due to the deficiency of iodine in the feed grain, that is, the grain in which iodine is located.

In the management of the breed sow now being supplied by the Alberta Government, attention is paid to all of these points.

Each sow is confined in a box, small eight feet square. No sow serves more than one sow each day, and that only once.

Sunlight, fresh air, exercise and protein are supplied by feeding largely on whole oats thrown broadcast on the ground in such a way that the feed is obtained only a grain at a time, and the animals must work practically all day to satisfy their hunger. After a fall of snow, a snow pion is used to clean off a new feeding place. In extremely cold weather they are fed in the same manner under cover.

Mineral matter is supplied by feeding each sow a small tin of bone meal, salt and sulphur at the rate of one ounce each, ten pounds cane salt and one pound of sulphur, barley and frozen wheat are bandied. Iodine is supplied in the drinking water at the rate of five drops to each sow three times per week.

As the heaviest losses are usually sustained among the early farrowed litters, no sows have been bred of farrow before April 20th.

With all of these precautions good results should be obtained from the animals thus supplied.

How You May Write to Prisoners of War.

Up to the present it has been permissible to send letters destined for persons in an enemy country or a country in the occupation of the enemy subject to censorship through the medium of an intermediary in a neutral country. An arrangement has now been made whereby such correspondence can be forwarded through the medium of Mexico, The Cook & Son, 200 St. Catherine St., Montreal, in connection with the authority received by their London House from the British Government to undertake the transmission of such correspondence.

The letters to be forwarded must relate only to private news and must not contain any reference to military or naval movements, to political and economic conditions or the like. The letter should be enclosed in an envelope legibly addressed to its ultimate destination, and must be left open in accordance with the censorship regulations of enemy countries. This should then be placed in a similar envelope addressed to The Cook & Son, 200 St. Catherine St., Montreal, together with a self-addressed, returnable envelope, and a postal note for twenty-five cents to cover the charge.

Full particulars may be obtained from The Cook & Son on writing to them at 200 St. Catherine St., W. Montreal, and enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for the reply.

Letters addressed to enemy and enemy occupied territory can only be sent in this manner and any which are being forwarded through other than this authorized channel will be returned to the sender. This does not affect in any way correspondence addressed to Prisoners of War which is to be forwarded in accordance with Prisoner of War regulations.
